

Free online tutoring and workshops for children of essential workers

You stay at work to help people
Kids stay at home to learn

Dear parents,

Student Corps thanks you for your great work helping people during the COVID-19 pandemic. We know that you are all working day and night to help society during this difficult time, and we want find a way to reduce the amount of exhaustion that you are experiencing right now. Student Corps is eager to help you by tutoring your children with their homework or help to enrich their stay-at-home learning through fun activities and workshop virtually while you are working hard. We want to help them continue to learn even while they are out of school and find ways to help you all get through the crisis in high spirits. During this time, it is important that people support and show compassion to each other, and this is something we can do for your children! We truly appreciate the sacrifices you are making right now and hope to make this time just a little bit easier for you.

A little bit more about us:

We are a nationwide group of 6-12th graders, dedicated to finding ways in which we can help those around us. There are different chapters throughout the US that will organize and host community service events in which we recruit fellow students to help.

A little more about the program:

We will use Zoom for all classes. Some examples of classes are drawing classes and sing along activities with little kids, beginners chess classes for small groups, one-on-one tutoring for middle school and high school math, science, English, etc. The time will be late afternoon and early evening.
